DETAILED ACTION

Response to Amendment

This office action is in response to amendment filed May 20, 2005. Claims 1-103 are currently pending.

Election/Restrictions

Restriction to one of the following inventions is required under 35 U.S.C. 121:

- I. Claims 1-22, 55-103, drawn to server for receiving information and distributing award, classified in class 705, subclass 14.
- II. Claims 23-32, drawn to terminal for accepting and placing formulation of problem, classified in class 705, subclass 14.
- III. Claims 33-54, drawn to a server and terminal for receiving and placing formulation of problem, classified in class 705, subclass 14.

The inventions are distinct, each from the other because of the following reasons:

Inventions I and II are related as subcombinations disclosed as usable together in a single combination. The subcombinations are distinct from each other if they are shown to be separately usable. In the instant case, invention I has separate utility such as server operable to receive formulation of problem. See MPEP § 806.05(d).

Inventions II and I are related as subcombinations disclosed as usable together in a single combination. The subcombinations are distinct from each other if they are shown to be separately usable. In the instant case, invention II has separate utility such as terminal for accepting and placing formulation of problem. See MPEP § 806.05(d).

Inventions III and I are related as combination and subcombination. Inventions in this relationship are distinct if it can be shown that (1) the combination as claimed does not require the particulars of the subcombination as claimed for patentability, and (2) that the subcombination has utility by itself or in other combinations (MPEP § 806.05(c)). In the instant case, the combination as claimed does not require the particulars of the subcombination as claimed because the terminal to accept the formulation of the problem to be solved; send onto the network from the plurality of other participants the suggested solutions to the problem, and receive off of the network a selection of tools for controlling the distribution of the portions of the award, independently claimed in subcombination Group III is not a limitation for the independently claimed combination I. The subcombination has separate utility such as a terminal for accepting the problem to be solved and suggestion solutions to the problem from other participants. Examiner considers that since applicant independently claim the invention of this group, it is prima facie showing that the invention are intended to be independent and distinct and are shown to be separately usable.

Inventions III and II are related as combination and subcombination. Inventions in this relationship are distinct if it can be shown that (1) the combination as claimed does not require the particulars of the subcombination as claimed for patentability, and (2) that the subcombination has utility by itself or in other combinations (MPEP § 806.05(c)). In the instant case, the combination as claimed does not require the particulars of the subcombination as claimed because a server on a network, the server operable to: to receive from first participant via a network a formulation of a problem to be solved, receive from a plurality of other participants via the network suggested solutions to the problem, and distribute portions of an award to those participants who contribute the suggested solutions to the problem, independently claimed in subcombination Group III is not a limitation for the independently claimed combination II. The subcombination has separate utility such as a server to receive from first participant via a network a formulation of a problem to be solved, receive from a plurality of other participants via the network suggested solutions to the problem, and distribute portions of an award to those participants who contribute the suggested solutions to the problem. Examiner considers that since applicant independently claim the invention of this group, it is prima facie showing that the invention are intended to be independent and distinct and are shown to be separately usable.

Because these inventions are distinct for the reasons given above and have acquired a separate status in the art because of their recognized divergent subject matter, restriction for examination purposes as indicated is proper.
